

Who Grows Your Food?

Hickory Nut Gap Farm Eggs • Fairview, NC

Annie Ager is a third generation farmer at Hickory Nut Gap farm and lives in the great white house at the top of the famous mountain pass with her husband, John, her herd of horses, and of course the flock of laying hens out back. Annie wants you to know that it is really long-time farmhand Clarence who lets the chickens out in the mornings, gathers the eggs daily, and carries them up to the springhouse where they are cleaned and packaged for the trip into town. Clarence is hard to get a picture of, but his care for the Hickory Nut Gap hens is obvious when you taste their eggs.

Annie Ager